

Celebrating the 4th Annual Community Golf Tournament! Hey there, fellow golf enthusiasts and community champions!

It was that time of year again when our community came together for a day of golf, fun, and camaraderie at the 4th Annual White City / Emerald Park Community Golf Tournament at the Aspen Links Golf Club Course. And what a spectacular event it turned out to be! With the sun shining bright and the greens looking luscious, we couldn't have asked for a better day. Aspen Links is looking spectacular.

One of the most heartwarming aspects of our community is how we rally together to make events like this possible. We want to extend a heartfelt thank you to all the local businesses that generously donated prizes, helping to elevate this year's tournament to new heights. Your support is the driving force behind the success of the event, and we appreciate your commitment to our community.

The 4th Annual Community Golf Tournament was not just about swinging clubs and sinking putts; it was about building connections, fostering friendships, and creating memories. Seeing neighbours, friends, and even newcomers all coming together to enjoy a day on the golf course was truly awesome.

One of the highlights of the day was the fantastic attire many of the teams sported. Our community members went all out with their golfthemed costumes, making the tournament even more entertaining. From golf pros to whimsical golfthemed costumes, it was a sight to behold.

As golfers teed off, laughter echoed across the fairways, and the friendly competition was palpable.

Celebrating the 4th Annual Community Golf Tournament!

Golfers of all skill levels, from beginners to seasoned pros, came together to celebrate the sport they love. The spirit of unity and camaraderie was truly inspiring.

Throughout the day, the golf course was abuzz with excitement and cheers as players attempted those tricky putts and sought that elusive hole-in-one. The sense of achievement, even in the face of missed shots. was infectious. There was even a little gnome out there to be found. It reminded us that it's not iust about the score; it's about the experience and the shared journey.

The 19th hole, the clubhouse, was abuzz with stories and laughter as participants shared their golfing triumphs and near misses. This sense of community, of coming together to celebrate not only the winners but also the shared experience, is what makes our annual tournament so special.

The trophy for 1st place in the tournament went to the White City Councillor team, consisting of Andrew Boschman, Scott Moskal, Kris Moen, and Bill Kryzsik. The trophy is on display at the clubhouse. A huge thanks to our local businesses, the heart and soul of our community, for their generous support. Your donations made this event truly memorable.

I also want to express our gratitude to all the participants, my husband Randy and son Hudson for all hours they put in to help prepare. A big thank you to the Mayor of White City, Brian Fergusson, for spotting our $10,000 hole-inone that was sponsored by Harvard Western Insurance.

Create spooky peanut spiders

Making these creepy critters together is a great family activity – and they're sure to scare off all the ghosts and goblins on Halloween.

SPOOKY PEANUT SPIDERS Materials:

Whole peanut, in-shell Black marker Two 12" (30 cm) pipe cleaners, orange Scissors White glue Clear tape

Directions:

- 1. Carefully open peanut, ensuring each half shell is intact.
- 2. With black marker, colour the outer surface of each half shell. Let dry.
- 3. Fold one pipe cleaner in half. Using sharp scissors, cut pipe cleaner into two equal pieces at fold. Repeat step with second pipe cleaner to make a total of four pieces, each approximately 6" (15 cm) in length.

- 4. Colour each piece of pipe cleaner with black stripes using marker. Let dry.
- 5. Generously apply glue along edge and inside of one half shell. Place each piece of pipe cleaner side by side, centred and perpendicular to the shell. Generously apply glue along the edge of the second half shell and affix on top of the pipe cleaners, ensuring both half shells are aligned and edges match. Use two pieces of clear tape to secure the front and back of the peanut shell. Remove tape when glue dries.
- 6. Separate each pipe cleaner piece and carefully bend at angles to make joints.

Savour the flavours of France: Duck confit with honey and rosemary

Indulge in the rustic sophistication of duck confit with honey and rosemary, a French delight that brings the heartwarming tastes of the southwest to your table. This sumptuous dish is a perfect centerpiece for gatherings, whether you're hosting an intimate dinner or a festive family feast. Tender duck meat, infused with a luscious honey and rosemary sauce, complements the crispy roasted potatoes.

French Duck Confit with Honey and Rosemary

Prep time: 20-30 minutes Cook Time: 2 hours Makes: 4 servings

Ingredients:

4 whole confit duck legs 2 tbsp (30 ml) duck fat 1 onion, chopped 2 cloves garlic, minced 2 large carrots, diced 2 celery stalks, diced ½ cup (125 ml) red wine 1 cup (250 ml) honey 2 tsp (10 ml) soy sauce 2 sprigs fresh rosemary 2 cloves garlic, skin on, lightly crushed 8 large potatoes, skin on 12 baby potatoes, skin on ½ cup (125ml) fresh parsley, chopped Salt and pepper, to taste

Directions:

- 1. Heat a heavy-bottomed pot or Dutch oven over medium heat. Add the duck fat and confit duck legs, browning them on all sides for approximately 5 to 7 minutes. Remove and set aside.
- 2. In the same pot, add the onion, garlic, carrots and celery. Sauté until the vegetables are softened, about 5 minutes.
- 3. Pour in the red wine and let it reduce by half; around 5 to 7 minutes.
- 4. Add the honey, soy sauce, rosemary sprigs and crushed garlic cloves to the pot. Stir and bring the mixture to a gentle simmer. Let it infuse for 10 minutes.
- 5. Return the duck legs to the pot, ensuring they are submerged in the sauce. Cover and let the mixture cook over low heat for 1½ to 2 hours until the meat becomes tender and easily falls off the bone.
- 6. Carefully remove the duck legs from the sauce and shred the meat using a fork. Return the shredded meat to the sauce and mix well.

- 7. While the duck is cooking, preheat your oven to 375°F (190°C). Cut the large potatoes in half lengthwise. Place these potatoes, cut side down, in a large oven-safe skillet with the melted duck fat. Cook for 5 minutes until they take on a light golden hue. Transfer the skillet to the oven and roast the potatoes for 15 minutes, until they are crisp and golden.
- 8. In a large pot of salted boiling water, cook the baby potatoes until tender, approximately 15 minutes. Drain.
- 9. Once the duck is ready, arrange the roasted potatoes on a serving platter. Sprinkle them with fresh parsley, salt and pepper.
- 10. Serve the duck meat and sauce over the roasted potatoes.
- 11. Place the baby potatoes alongside the duck and roasted potatoes.

12. Garnish with chopped fresh parsley.

Pair with a robust red wine and immerse yourself in the rich flavours and traditions of France. Learn about exquisite villa getaways in France and other locales at hostedvillas.com.

Give Your Home A Proper Send-Off

It's completely normal to be emotional about selling your home. Reliving all the memories, big milestones, and every day glimmers can bring a roller coaster of feelings.

Those four walls have been your safety net and security blanket for many years and now it's time to say farewell. But how do you let go? Here are a few tips that has helped my clients get through this big transition and embrace the change that lies ahead.

• Reflect and Acknowledge: Take some time to reflect on the memories and experiences you've had in the house. Acknowledge the importance it has had in your life.

• Walk Through Each Room: Take a walk through each room and allow yourself to reminisce. Recall special moments, both big and small, that took place in each space.

• Capture Photographs and Videos: Document the house, room by room. This can serve as a keepsake and help you preserve the memories associated with each area.

• Leave a Personal Touch: Consider leaving a small note or memento behind. It could be a heartfelt letter to the new owners or a small token that holds sentimental value.

• Thank the House: Express gratitude for the shelter and warmth it provided you over the years. This may feel symbolic, but it can be a meaningful gesture.

• Embrace Change and New Beginnings: Recognize that moving on is a natural part of life. Embrace the new opportunities and adventures that await you in your next home.

• Host a Farewell Gathering: If circumstances allow, consider inviting close friends or family to join you in saying goodbye. Share stories and celebrate the time you've spent in the house.

• Take a Final Tour: Before you leave for the last time, take one final tour of the house. Take in the sights, sounds, and even the scents that are unique to that space.

• Closure Ritual: Create a small ritual to mark the moment. This could be lighting a candle, saying a prayer, or simply taking a moment of silence to acknowledge the significance of this transition.

• Leave with a Positive Mindset: As you step out of the house for the last time, do so with a positive mindset.

Focus on the new adventures and opportunities that lie ahead.

• Stay Connected to the Memories: Even though you're leaving the physical space behind, the memories will always be a part of you. Keep photos, mementos, and stories to remind you of those cherished moments.

• Give Yourself Time to Grieve: It's completely normal to feel a sense of loss when leaving a place with so many memories. Give yourself the time and space to grieve this transition.

Remember that it's okay to feel a mix of emotions during this process. It's a significant life event, and it's important to honor your feelings. If you are looking for help in this department, the best process is to start early through decluttering and packing up things so you don't add onto the overwhelm that already comes with moving. That's where I come in. Downsizing and helping clients sift through their things before they move is my specialty. A few months ago an article in the Community Newsletter posed this hypothesis: "Shading crops with solar panels can improve farming, lower food costs and reduce emissions."

Okay, I'm a sucker for intriguing headlines so I decided to read on. The article was written by Joshua M. Pearce who, apparently, is a professor of Information Technology and Innovation at Western University.

The very first paragraph aroused my skepticism by asking if the reader has noticed how grass grows taller under a backyard trampoline because "many crops, including these grasses grow better when protected from the sun." I don't own a trampoline with which to observe this phenomenon, but I have assumed all along that plants growing in shade are often taller because they are trying to reach the sunlight. Live and learn, I guess. I plowed on.

The next paragraph explained how researchers "have been working on shading large crop lands with solar panels - on purpose," a practice called agrivoltaic farming. While the prime purpose of all those solar panels out in the country is to generate electricity, who knew that we could also "grow crops in the protected shadows of solar panels." Now the professor really had my attention. He continues:

"Many crops grown here (in Canada) including corn, lettuce, potatoes, tomatoes, wheat and pasture grass have already been proven to increase with agrivoltaics." I don't take a lot of wooden nickels so I double checked to make sure this wasn't an April fools' joke. Nope. July, 2023. Reading on, I was informed also that ing wheat under a field of solar panels, ditto for harvesting corn. But I have spent countless hours on a tractor bailing hay, some of those "pasture grass" crops that Canadians should be growing under solar panels according to the professor. I was beginning to think that the article was written by a badly programmed Chat GPT or similar artificial intelligence when I read that "embracing agrivoltaics in Canada would completely drop fossil fuel

I've never driven a combine so I can only imagine the challenge of combining wheat under a field of solar panels, ditto for harvesting corn.

"solar panels are put over different types of crops, including fruit trees."

Apparently crops yields increase because the microclimate created under solar panels "conserves water and protects plants from excess sun." All along I have been thinking that shielding crops from rain and sunlight would somehow have a deleterious effect on plant growth. Not so, apparently.

Canada, the article urges, needs to start large-scale agriculture in the shadow of solar panels for such crops as broccoli, spinach and tomatoes as well as field crops like "potatoes, corn and wheat."

I've never driven a combine so I can only imagine the challenge of combinuse," and that "less than one per cent of Canadian land would be sufficient to support over 25% of the country's electrical needs using this system." One per cent of Canada's land mass is about ninety thousand square kilometers. That's a lot of solar panels.

When the good professor wandered off into the weeds (solar panel-shaded weeds I assume) of touting the benefits of agrivoltaics for cryptocurrency miners, I figured I had had enough of agrivoltaics as being viable for anything other than growing a couple of tomato plants under couple of a back-yard solar panels.

I'll bet the professor has never been a farmer. Or been on a farm for that matter.

Opposition to the proposed composting facility in the R.M. of Edenwold to deal with Regina's compostables is - how to put this - overwhelming? By the numbers: 196 people at the public hearing, 35 written submissions opposed, including one with a 519 signature petition, 12 verbal submissions opposed. Strongest opposition comes from Pilot Butte which will bear the brunt of any failure at the facility. In favour: the company which will operate the facility and three other individuals.

The R.M.'s motto of "cooperation" (with neighbouring municipalities) has now gone out the window. Ah yes, but think of the increased tax revenues the facility will generate. 'Twas ever thus.

Call me if you disagree. 569-2345 or emeraldcity158@gmail.com

What colour comes to mind when you think of Halloween? If it's a bold shade of orange, it's time to start thinking green.

But don't get spooked out by being an environmental champion, turn your Halloween into Hallow-green with these simple tips that will help protect our environment, one trick (or treat) at a time.

Carry reusable bags

While trick-or-treating with your kids, be sure to trade in your plastic or paper bags for cloth and canvas versions. Reusable bags or old pillowcases are not only the ultimate candy carriers big enough to let mom and dad sneak in some candy for themselves, but are environmentally friendly alternatives that won't wind up in the garbage after one use.

Reuse costumes

Halloween costumes generally end up in the trash and make their way into landfills. But there are alternatives to throwing your child's costume away just because it doesn't fit or it's time for a new look. Halloween costumes are the number one hand-medown because they never go out of style. Give them to a friend or family member, donate them to someone in need or purchase one from a thrift store at a discounted rate.

Decorate with reusable materials

Give your home the spook you're looking for without the environmental scare. To limit the amount of trash ending up in landfills, purchase items you can use year after year over singleuse items. When reusing battery-operated Halloween gadgets and décor such as a fog machine or lawn props, replace and recycle any old or damaged batteries. Halloween safety for your pet

Halloween isn't just for kids. Pets are joining the festivities too, but it's important to keep safety in mind while you celebrate. To make Halloween a real treat for pets and ensure they stay safe and happy, here are a few tips to keep in mind:

Entertaining at home

Is your dog easily spooked? Even the friendliest pet may be alarmed by a ghost or witch at the front door. One of the best ways to help eliminate unwanted surprises is by establishing a safe, pets-only room in the house. This may also put trick-or-treaters who are uncomfortable around pets at ease.

"Before having pets join in the Halloween festivities, it's important to assess whether your pet will be comfortable participating or if the festivities will cause undue stress," says Dr. Robyn Jaynes ,a pet care expert at PetSmart. "If you have a young or senior pet, or one that is shy around others, it's better to give them a quiet space away from all the activity or host a small family celebration where they'll feel more comfortable."

Pet-friendly treats

Chocolate is particularly tempting for pets, but it can make them seriously ill. Pet parents should keep all Halloween candy out of pets' reach. Also, choose a treat that will help pets celebrate Halloween and includes health benefits, such as Greenies Dental Chews, which keep dogs' and cats' teeth clean and breath fresh.

Safety first

Is your pet ready to step out on the street? Reflective leashes, collars and ID tags with flashing lights are essential accessories for any pet Halloween costume. Pets should also have proper identification that includes pet parents' contact information. Finally, make sure that an adult is holding the leash and that the pet is at ease around strangers and crowds.

More tips on pet safety as well as Halloween costumes and toys can be found at PetSmart or petsmart.com.

Over the years I have worked with clients who are in unhappy, even toxic, relationships. They may have tried everything, including counselling, but history just keeps repeating itself. When asked why they stay if they don't see it ever changing, sometimes the answer is that they are afraid of being alone.

Sometimes these people, often women, are CEOs, highly educated and professionally recognized, and are viewed as very strong. Yet when it comes to the idea of leaving a bad relationship they crumble.

It is the inner child of that person who is afraid of being alone. For a young child, being all alone can be terrifying. They do not have the ability to care for themselves, and if left alone for long they feel abandoned.

It is the inner child of the strong woman that holds her back from taking charge of her life. Very few women are incapable of being on their own, but the inner child takes over and expresses fear about doing so.

Certainly, there are cases where finances limit the ability to move on but that is different from being emotionally frightened. Fear of being alone is fear of being with ourselves, and being independent.

Unquestionably, a major life shift can be daunting. However, there is support in terms of lawyers, bankers, realtors, psychologists, family, and friends. Livthey are embarrassed. This leaves them isolated and vulnerable. It is important to share with someone. If there are no friends or relatives with whom you can share, seek out counselling. Others think that ending the relationship spells doom for the children. This ing on our own is part of becoming an independent adult.

Being in a toxic relationship eats away at confidence and self-esteem. It can even have adverse effects on physical and mental health. No one deserves to be mistreated or devalued. If you are in a situation like this, and you have tried everything to improve the relationship, you need to rethink things. It may be the partner's responsibility for the hurt we feel, but it is our responsibility for allowing it to continue.

As a child we have no ability to change the circumstances in which we live. As adults we might feel powerless, but we are not. Millions of women have freed themselves from bad situations, and virtually none would say it is easy.

Some women tell no one of their suffering because is not true. Children can thrive after divorce unless it is adversarial. Living in a home where there is stress, tension, arguing, and fighting is worse than living with one parent at a time.

And for those who think therapists always tell women to leave their partners, that is untrue as well. Therapists do not tell people what to do, but rather help them to clarify their thinking and consider all options for a healthier life.

natural beauty. Exploring the idyllic countryside is an opportunity to reconnect with nature and find solace in the great outdoors.

A wine-lover's paradise: Renowned worldwide for exceptional wines, Burgundy's wine culture is deeply ingrained in its identity, and its vineyards rank among the UNESCO list of World Heritage sites.

"Wine enthusiasts will relish in the chance to visit prestigious wineries, learn about the winemaking process and savour some of the finest wines France – and indeed the world – has to offer," says Chris Mark, travel expert with HV Luxury Travel, which organizes private tours and provides accommodation listings around the world. A foodie's fantasy: Burgundy boasts a rich culinary heritage, celebrated for traditional dishes and premium ingredients. "From escargot to coq au vin," Mark says, "every meal is a delightful exploration of local cuisine."

A culture vulture's nest: Burgundy's history is steeped in tales of chivalry, royalty and architectural wonders. History enthusiasts will revel in the chance to explore historical landmarks, ancient abbeys and charming villages that seem frozen in time.

An active explorer's adventure: For travellers who prefer not to keep still during their holidays, there are plenty of ways to get your activity fix. Mark's top tip - which will satisfy any type of vacationer - is to take an e-bike tour through the region. "The experience is unique, allowing travellers to connect with the land and people, to create lasting memories that go beyond the usual tourist spots," he says.

He adds, "It allows travellers of varying fitness levels to cover longer distances with ease, making it accessible to a wide range of adventurers."
